“To whom much is given, much is expected!” Such is the life of a teacher. Now firmly in my second year of teaching, I have found that every day in the classroom has served as an affirmation that I have been fortunate enough to find my one true calling. Every student that I have come across has helped me understand that not only is every child different, but that each one has an endless potential to go out and change the world. And with the help and support of the wonderful faculty at Somerset Academy I am confident that each child which comes through my doors will not only find a welcoming and challenging environment, but also one where they will be given the opportunity to understand the world around them, and be given the tools to go out and change it.
